Subject: Resitape joined forYou Project to promote women's health among its employees

On May 21st Mrs. Laura Lanza, the founder of forYou Project and CEO of Fluorseals, was invited to meet Resitape female workers, which make up a large share of its employees, to present a new program aimed at breast cancer prevention. On this occasion Resitape CEO Matteo Panizza proudly announced that Resitape had decided to support such an important initiative offering free yearly breast checks and support by breast specialists arranged within the factory premises.

Mrs. Lanza's speech was very moving. "When I found out I had breast cancer", she explained, "At first, I felt devastated, but then I decided to do something about it, granting breast cancer prevention opportunities to my employees. I have been offering free yearly breast checks, guidance and easier access to care by breast specialists to my workers since then. Prevention is a key element in fighting this illness. In Italy free breast screenings are offered only to women over 45, whereas younger women do not get the same prevention opportunities. That is why this project is so important!"

forYou Project was founded by Mrs. Lanza in 2023 together with other female entrepreneurs from Lombardy with the aim of promoting breast cancer prevention especially among young women. Breast cancer is the most widespread tumor among women in the world. Forty percent of persons affected are under 45 years of age.

Resitape and Fluorseals are about to launch a joint press release titled "United in PTFE, united in women's health promotion".
